2019/2018/2017/2016

11/27/2019 Everett, Washington For many years the City of Everett has had breed-specific legislation that classified pit bulls as 'Potentially Dangerous Dogs' and imposed certain restrictions on confinement and ownership. On November 6, 2019, Everett City Council voted unanimously to remove this breed-specific language. The new ordinance will go into effect November 27, 2019. Dogs that were previously classified as Potentially Dangerous by the City of Everett solely because of their breed – and not as a result of a bite or other aggressive behavior – will have this classification removed.

*Governor signed 5/30/2019 effective 1/1/2020 State of Washington. Under Appleton's House Bill 1026, cities may not prohibit ownership of specific breeds of dog unless the city meets a number of conditions. Among them: There must be a process for exempting individual dogs who pass the AKC Canine Good Citizen test or its equivalent. Dogs who pass the good-behavior test are exempt from breed-based regulations for at least two years, and may retest to continue the exemption. Dogs who initially fail the good-behavior test can retest within a reasonable period of time.

1/2018 New Albany, Ohio The city of New Albany will no longer automatically designate pit bulls as vicious dogs solely because of their breed. Six members of city council unanimously voted Tuesday to eliminate a section of city code concerning pit bull terriers and related breeds. Previously, owners could be criminally charged if they didn't obtain liability insurance and confine or leash their dogs in specific ways.

1/2018 If passed in Senate, Pit bulls no longer banned in Bermuda. The controversial dogs are now on the restricted category, along with American bulldogs and American Staffordshire terriers. Walton Brown, the Minister of Home Affairs, said: "This means that dogs of these breeds are eligible for importation and breeding, but done under the strict guidelines and conditions set out by the Department of Environment and Natural Resources. I can assure you that Bermuda will not have a scenario where anything goes. We will still have laws, and they will be enforced, and the penalties are severe." Mr Brown was speaking as the House of Assembly approved the Dogs Amendment Act, which will have to be approved by the Senate before it becomes law. He said breed-specific policies have reduced the number of dog attacks, but resulted in household pets being seized and killed because of their breed. Mr Brown added: "The animal wardens spend an inordinate amount of time confiscating and euthanising dogs that have committed no acts of aggression. "This detracts from their efforts to deal with truly dangerous dogs or dogs that have endured abuse and improper care." Mr Brown said the killing of dogs because of their breed was "abhorrent". Mr Brown added: "The recategorisation is also based on our own data, which shows that only a minority of pitbulls have been a threat to public safety. Not most of them, and certainly not all of them." <http://www.royalgazette.com/news/article/20180616/pitbulls-no-longer-banned-dog-breed>

4/2017 On Tuesday, the city of Payette (Idaho) agreed to strip its version of that code and any other breed-specific references, prohibitions and restraints on its books as part of a settlement of a federal lawsuit with one Payette man. The city is the latest in southwest Idaho to change such ordinances, part of what appears to be a push by opponents of breed-specific ordinances. In December 2016, the city of Fruitland repealed its own similar code, and Payette County followed suit in early January. The city of Homedale on Tuesday also agreed to remove its breed-specific legislation.

1/2017 Purdy, Mo. One notable change was dropping the ban on pit bulls. The ordinance instead defined a fierce or dangerous dog and the procedure for determining the classification, including an order from the municipal judge to detain the dog until a hearing in front of aldermen within 30 days. 2016 Richmond, Mo. An ordinance prohibiting Richmond residents from owning pit bulls is history. Instead, existing ordinances covering any vicious dog, without naming a specific breed, is now deemed sufficient to include pit bulls, once singled out as a dangerous breed. The Richmond City Council on July 12 voted to strike from city ordinances all references to pit bulls. City officials had been considering the change and took action after area residents spoke at the June 14 council meeting and advocated for the change. <https://www.richmond-dailynews.com/2016/07/council-deletes-pit-bull-language-in-ordinances/>

2016 Newark, Ohio In a packed council chamber Monday night, the Newark City Council voted 5-5 for a new vicious dog law that is behavior-based and not breed-specific, leaving council President Don Ellington to break the tie. <http://www.newarkadvocate.com/story/news/local/2016/04/04/council-frees-pit-bulls-vicious-designation/82617034/>

2016 Buckner, Mo A couple of weeks ago, the city council of the city of Buckner, MO (Population 3,072) unanimously voted to repeal the community's 16 year old ban on 'pit bulls'. The change makes Buckner at least the 19th city in Missouri to repeal its breed-specific law. <http://btoellner.typepad.com/kcdogblog/2016/09/buckner-mo-repeals-pit-bull-ban.html>

Bexley, Ohio Bexley City Council members voted to lift a city wide ban on pit bulls at their Tuesday night. The ordinance passed 6-to-1 with the council president as the only no vote. There are restrictions with the ordinance such as owners having to register their pit bull as well as having the animal spayed and neutered.
